OBSERVATIONS:

The Students Satisfaction Survey conducted illustrates that a maximum number of students are quite satisfied with the Teaching-Learning & Evaluation process. The statistical data is indicative of further improvement in diverse areas. Overall students' satisfaction can be attained if all the issues are addressed properly and the institution endeavours to reach that point where each and every student feels satisfied with the existing teaching-learning process. Teachers of all the departments are urged to organize students' seminars, engage them in various academic activities and encourage them to attend classes regularly in order to attain full satisfaction of the students.
